INTERESTING FRATURES. After these came a most interesting feature-the Caledonian Club of New williams and Steers who, on account of the injury sustained by Inspector Conin, had entire charge of the parade, were early on hand. By 9 a. m. the organizations put in an appearance.

It had originally been expected to thave over 100,000 men in line, but this number was deemed unwieldy, and Gen. Butterfield issued orders for a reduction of 20 per cent in all delegations, so that the number actually marching was about 80,000. Drum and fife corps separated each detachment from the other, and a band headed each division, so that the music was continuous and inspiring both for the marchers and the spectators.

THE FARADE STARTS.

The parade started, shortly after ten o'clock, from Fifth avenue and Fifty-seventh street, the column passing down the avenue. As its head reached Twenty-seventy street, Mayor Grant, with the representative delegates from the civic, industrial and commercial societies and organizations of New York, who had been stationed in that vicinity awaiting leading the tention of their pieces attracting the parade, in their kilts and kirites attracted agreat to deal of attention and their pieces tirred up considerable enthusiasm all down the avenue. The first tableau, "the Declaration of Independence" was intended to represent the reading of the Declaration of Independence by John Nixon, in the State House yard, Philadelphia, July 8, 1770. This float was surrounded by an escort of 100 members of the Society of Veterans of the Regular Army and Navy.

The next float represented "Washington as Commander-in-Chief, oc-washington as Commander-in-C was rapturously greeted at every stand and by the parade and by the people who lined the curb stone. In this last division there were a number of inter-esting trade floats. Straggling at the end of the line were a lot of impromptu or are companies from the surrounding districts with their apparatus. As a re-sult the ferry companies and railroads were taxed to their utmost, special trains being sent out by the Pennsylva-nia, New Jersey Central, New York Central and other roads far into the night.

One of the incidents of the scene a the grand stand was when the Tammany braves were passing. There was ev braves were passing. There was evidently a most interesting conversation between the President and Mayor Grant. The President placed his left hand in a very friendly way on the Mayor's shoulder three or four times during the chat, which was accompanied with smiles and nods. President Harrison was evidently congratulating the chief brave of the Tammany order on his affiliations. Shortly after 1 o'clock the President got a Irugal luncheon of sandwiches and tea. While he was in the act of bolting one of the sandwiches an energetic and watchful photographer captured a negative of the scene with his camera.

When the plasterers came along they were moulding medallions of Washington, Lincoln, Harrison and other prominent men, and these they distributed freely among the throng which lined both sides of the avenue. One of the workers jumped from the float as the grand stand was reached and handed hulf a dozen of the plaster casts to President Harrison and Mayor Grant, who received them graciously. The chocolate-making girls flung bars of that tooth-some compound to the spectators and some compound to the spectators and treated those on the grand stand to an

SOME OF THE TABLEAUX. One of the tableaux which attracted special attention represented a great callery manned by sailors and b the legend "Columbus discovered America and gave her to Liberty," though the representation was scarcely true to history in that two maidens occupied seats in the stern of the vessel. Mayor then took his place on the stand beside the President and the big parade bogan to pass by.

The large stands, although well filled, were by no means crowded, except in one or two sections of the stand on the west side of the avenue. The first organization in the parade which made its appearance was the Columbia College students. It passed the President's stand at exactly twenty-five minutes past ten o'clock. The boys created much anusementby repeating in union the cry of "Who was General Washington," and accompanying the answer ("First it war, first in peace, first in the hearts of his countrymen") by a break down. Next followed the public school children. They made an excellent appearance, and in many instances marched better than some of the rank and file in yesterday's pageant. The children were welcomed by a tumult of applause, accompanied by a waving of handkerchiefs and dipping of flags in the hands of children and babies. The applause and hearty greeting continued until the children were well past the reviewing stand and made way for the next organization. The Grand Army men, as they passed the reviewing stand, were warmly greeted. One old veteran improved the opportunity afforded by the accessibility of the President to hand him a note. It was taken by President Harrison. As the parade passed before the President the bevy of handsome young girls on the float, showered huge bunches of roses on the President. Some little excitement was caused by some of the Tammany braves refusing or neglecting roses on the President. Some little ex-citement was caused by some of the Tammany braves refusing or neglecting to salute the President as they passed by. At first shouts of "hats off" were heard, but when it was seen that this had no effect, the balance of the files were loud-ly hissed except in a few instances where the proper salute was made. It is not thought that the Tammanyltes were in-tentionally disrespectful, but that they thought that the Tammanyites were intentionally disrespectful, but that they did not know they were expected to salute. Shortly before General Butterfield and his staff passed before the President Julius Sterberger, one of his aides, was thrown from his horse and suffered a broken leg. It seems pretty clear that, so far as the Centennial Committee is concerned, the expenses will exceed the money which has been appropriated by the State and the city, together with the subscriptions which have been secured by the Finance Committee, headed by Brayton Ives.

This statement is not made from absolute knowledge of the facts of the case, because Mr. Gerry and his associates have preserved the same golden silence concerning the finances of the affair which they have concerning everything else the Centennial has to do with. The conclusion is simply based on the fact that at a recent meeting of the Plan and Scope Committee a special reference was

The first account of the tragedy is, briefly, as follows:

The community was startled yesterday morning by the discovery of another horrible tragedy. At an early hour Jacob D. Shaulls, a wealthy farmer 60 years of age, who lived in Jefferson township, eight miles from this place, was found dead hanging to a tree back of his residence. Lying in the barnyard, a few feet away, was his young wife, shot through the body and italily wounded. Detective T. J. Picking hurried to the scene, and after an investigation arrested David and George Shaulis, sons of the old man and stepsons of Mrs. Shaulis.

They were brought to Somerset and lodged in juil charged with the crime. It was alleged that the old man committed suicide first and then David, his son, attempted to kill his step-mother, who is only 25 years of age, to prevent her inheriting the estate, the two boys hoping by this means to secure the property

A Strike Averted.

Aknon, O., May 1.—The strike among the miners of the Akron district, expected to-day when the summer scale of wages went into effect, did not occur. Operators had decided, instead of dropping from 85 cents to 80 cents, the usual summer price, to insist on 75. After much parieying, a compromise was made at 773 cents. Treasonable Anarchist Narrowly Escape Heing Lynched—A Terrible Panic at th Chicago, May 1.—One of the exciting incidents of yesterday was witnessed by about 500 persons who had assembled in ont of the headquarters of Fire Engine Company No. 17, at 80 West Lake street, Captain E. Anderson and a dozen members of the company were at work decorating the front of the building. Suddenly a man thrust his head from a window of the fourth story of the building east of the engine house, and after noting the work of decoration, announced himself as an Anarchist. He reviied the stars and stripes and the nounced himself as an Anarchist. He reviled the stars and stripes and the decorators in the most insulting manner. Little attention was paid to the man, however, until he floated the red flag of Anarchy from the window, announcing it as "My flag, —, my colors."

Then the crowd became excited and angry, and loud calls were heard. "Tear down that rag or you will be sorry you ever floated it," was cried from 100 which is valuable. The evidence so far adduced justifies the conclusion that twosons, David and George, hanged their father and then David an hour or so later shot his young step-mother through the body as she was returning from the barn to the house. The step-mother still lives and may recover. One thing is certain, the father was houng previous to the shooting of the mother. Early one morning about two years ago Mr. Shan is arrived in town, with a base of flows. debate was in progress as to the best way. Captain Anderson appeared on the roof of the building with a rope in his hand to the end of which was attached an iron articles advocating murder. Witness like hook. He lowered the hook until it came to the staff of the red rag and then a sudden jerk upward dislodged the unsighty banner. It fell to the sidewalk and a moment later had been torn the sidewalk. He was seized by a dozen men and some one cried out "get a rope; let's hang the anarchist dog." Several men rushed into the engine house and returned with a rope. In the meantime the man had been knocked down or tripped up half a dozen times, and blood was trickling from a wound under his left eye. About the time the men returned with a rope a police officer who had been sent from the Desplaines street station to see what the trouble was, appeared on the scene and advised the crowd to desist. The man whose name is M. W. Daly, was finally released and allowed to go up stairs.

At the time of the great rush and panic on the Lake front last night, a similar scene on a smaller scale was being enacted near Lincoln Park on the North Side. When the pyrotechnic disclaration acted near Lincoln Park on the North Side. When the pyrotechnic display in the park was concluded the immense crowd surged westward on North avenue. Just west of Clark street there is a wooden sidewalk elevated about four feet from the ground for a considerable distance. While the people were crushing and pushing each other over this sidewalk, an altercation ensued between two men and some one fell down. Somebody else followed suit. Then it seemed as though bedlam had been let loose; women shricked, men swore, children as though bediam had been lot loose; women shrieked, men swore, children cried. Pell mell fell fully a dozen more people, some of them women and children, and at last while the struggling mass of human beings was endeavoring to save itself from trampling the fallen funder foot, the wooden sidewalk gave way and fully a hundred people were thrown over the stop of each other in a confused and seemingly inextricable heap. The horror of the situation was further added to by the thousands of people behind those who had fallen in the crash.
